

PRESS RELEASE

Envoy's Exeter Expansion Continues with a Homecoming

An Exeter property management company is hoping to build on its recent success after the appointment of a new property manager.

Envoy Commercial Property Management, which is part of Vickery Holman, has welcomed Julian Jenkins to its team.

The move sees a return to his home city for Julian, who has spent the last six years working in London and Wiltshire.

"After working my way around the south of the country, it has always been my aim to return to the South West as this is where I was born and bred," said Julian, who as property manager is responsible for the day-to-day management of Envoy's Exeter portfolio.

"The bright lights of London wore off after four years and after stopping in Wiltshire for a couple of years, I am now firmly based back in Exeter."

Based at the company's Southernhay offices, Julian will look after a mixture of properties including multi-tenanted industrial estates, city centre offices, retail, and leisure investments for a range of clients including national PLCs through to individual local investors.

"One of the reasons why I decided to join Envoy is that it has tremendous potential for the future, not only in Exeter, but the whole of the South West," said Julian.

---

8 March 2007

"Exeter itself seems a buzzing environment with the anticipation of the new Princesshay development, which is due to open in the autumn and this seems to have had a knock on effect to the city centre as a whole.

"The job itself is varied and every day I have something different to deal with.

"Together with Vickery Holman, we are keen to invest in the property management side of the business and I am pleased to be involved at this stage of expansion. "

For more information on Envoy Property Management please contact Julian Jenkins on 01392 203010 or visit www.vickeryholman.com.

End

1 February 2007

For further information please contact:

Mark Picken,
mpad

Tel: 01326 377676 Mob: 07866 860363